Polygender

32 VIEW SOURCE

Polygender is a gender identity which can be literally translated as 'many genders'. Polygender people experience multiple gender identities, either simultaneously or varying between them. These can be male, female and/or any non-binary identities. For other identities for those who experience multiple genders, please see multigender.

Polygender people may also identify as multigender, non-binary and/or transgender. If a polygender person feels that their identity changes over time or depending on circumstance, they may also identify as genderfluid, which describes any person whose gender identity varies over time.

Polygender people can have any gender expression but many prefer to be seen as androgynous and/or change their presentation to be more masculine or feminine depending on their current identity. Polygender people may experience dysphoria all, some or none of the time.

Okay so I'm stargender but sometimes I experience some genderfluidity here and there so I want to start identifying as polystargender, but I don't think this is a coined term yet lol... so if I were to make a flag for it, I might wanna use the polygender flag and put on a star? or maybe just combine the two?

> Go for whatever you'd like! It doesn't matter if the term has been coined yet. You can use both gender fluid and stargender, stargenderfluid, genderstarfluid, polyfluid, polystargenderfluidflux (much much long), polystarfluid, starfluid, fluidstar, polystargender, anything you can imagine. However, if its just a bit of fluidity and is still somewhat stargender, then I'd suggest starflux for a short term that makes sense to others.
> I am sorry to say that if you do change your identity, the term probably won't be coined yet. I feel the pain of being underrepresented, some people forget demigirls like me even exist. You can also go for poly gender, but that doesn't seem to fit you much.

Hey! i am so unbelievably confused abt my gender lmao. so i don't mind people thinking of me as any gender, and i use any pronouns. but i don't know what i think of myself, y'know? i've been exploring all these labels, and polygender could be a possibility. but i might just label myself as under the non-binary umbrella and leave it at that lol-

Can I be poly gender if I feel like every gender but fully male. So basically gender fluid as my gender changes at different times accept I never will identify a fully male but sometimes I will feel partly male and use he/they pronouns or can i just be genderfluid?? Because I feel more comfortable identifying as gender fluid?...

Xixxxxxx • 7/3/2021

I know this is a bit of a late answer but you can absolutely identify as genderfluid. Also, have you looked into genderfaer? Genderfaer is exactly what you're describing, its just more specific than genderfluid.

So I am really confused...I was born female but now I feel like part female, part male and also part non-binary....I don't really know what this means. Am I polygender or another thing?

How is polygender different from pangender ?? /gen

Krylten • 6/4/2021

Pangender is experiencing ALL genders meanwhile polygender is experiencing multiple, but not all of them :)

Jooncharade • 6/5/2021

Thank you so much i identify as pangender now as of a couple days and your reply rlly helped <3

Can you be Polygender and Genderfluid as I'm kinda confused on the line between the two

Flqw3r • 7/29/2021

Yes, you can! I also feel both polygender and genderfluid, so I get it. You can choose if you wish to identify as polygender or genderfluid, I personally chose to identify as polygender.

Is polygenderflux a possibility

Flqw3r • 7/29/2021

Yes, there is polygenderflux (or polyflux) but it is not a very common gender identity.

So is Polygender different from multigender?

Flqw3r • 7/29/2021

Multigender is mostly used as an umbrella term (but some people do use it) so yes, there is a difference. Polygender falls under the multigender umbrella.

I am very gender confused. I was born a female, but I am very masculine (even more so when I am in a social mood) however, when I am interacting with people when I am not in a social mood I become more feminine. I also identify with male, female and non binary so very confused. h e l p.

Ay1x9704 • 4/26/2021

Hm, maybe Non-Binary or Genderfluid?

Ay1x9704 • 4/26/2021

Trigender could work too

Darthcat14 • 5/21/2021

You may be genderfluid or pangender also

Hiya! I feel like im polygender, but what are the polygender pronouns?

Sydisme • 4/5/2021

You can use any pronouns, just go with whatever feels right!

Radicalrunt • 4/25/2021

And you can even go by neopronouns if those feel more comfy for you^^^

Is the difference between quadgender and polygender that polygender is less specific?

(Edited by 00gs06)

QueerPotato • 4/6/2021

yep :) polygender can also be used for people who don't really know how many genders they have as it just means multiple/many

Is there something called like octogender, or octalgender? For 8 genders.

QueerPotato • 4/6/2021

I think people with 8 genders would just go by polygender or multigender, but you can use that term for yourself, whatever feels right :)

Can i be polygender and gender fluid? i am omnisexual and demisexual but still questioning my gender, i feel like a girl some days a boy others non binary and sometimes all at once or sometimes nonbinary and boy or nonbinary girl or like a girl and boy, i think it might also just be a phase, somedays i accept myself think i am something else or just yell at myself for even thinking this is ok

(Edited by Blackcatmylove)

SisiNiSawa621 • 2/8/2021

I may be wrong but yes, you can be. Polygender means many genders, and genderfluid would count as one of those.

(Side note: Maybe you're bi/pangender)

Ire.rose • 5/16/2021

Hi, I'm polygender, and I went through a lot of what it sounds like you are going through

Hi, I'm polygender, and I went through a lot of what it sounds like you are going through. Sometimes im a girl, sometimes a boy, sometimes nb, and sometimes im something else. I thought I was going through a phase too, and it took me a while but talking with someone helped me to accept who I am.

I'm definently Polygender, I'm o with being called all probouns but He/Him, I prefer She/her more, but I'm o with almost all pronouns, It makes me feel happy to learn more about it, when I realized what I thought, I learned about Polygender, Pangender and Omnigender (I knew about most of the others) and I felt really at place with Polygender,

Im a girl but i feel non binary but at the same time im ok with she and they pronouns, i dont know if im just non binary or polygender.

Double-bi • 10/31/2020

Bigender maybe?

Double-bi • 1/19/2021

@Gaytransgenderfaggs Scientifically, you are incorrect, Would you like me to educate you on the biology and psychology of sex and gender? Remember, it's always okay to not know things!

QueerPotato • 4/6/2021

you could be bigender, or maybe demigirl or paragirl too :)
also if you feel like your gender changes check out genderfluid, genderflux, and fluidflux

Ok so, I've recently decided I'm a polygender and I've talked to multiple of my friends but they don't exactly know and although I've been confident in this until now, I wanted to get more opinions, so please read and respond I'd greatly appreciate it.
Before my decision to be polygender I had always been a very feminine person and loved that side of myself, of course especially getting out of that little kid girly phase I was more tom-boyish and I didn't like to chase the boys around at recess but I didn't think much of it. But I had a gender crisis recently, I'm just in 7th grade and it honestly came out of nowhere. The thought of not being just female or being something other than it. And knowing of sexualities and genders and all of that for awhile at this point, I was a loud, proud, lesbian.
Yes, that is my problem. I was and still am a lesbian, but is that possible? As a polygender I've given myself the female and male pronouns, the they/them labels kind of make me uncomfortable sometimes but at the same time sometimes I'm okay with them, some days I feel much more feminine and then all the sudden I have a spurt of masculinity. But I still have that big feminine side to myself and I only am attracted to females. I still identify as a lesbian and I feel like I'll continue to, but to you, as a reader. Does that sound odd? Like I shouldn't? Like it's not possible? My family and friends know I'm a lesbian and I'm very proud of being one, I like it. But now being polygender I've only opened up to online friends and one real life one.
Please give me your opinion and advice on me using she/her and he/him labels while still considering myself a lesbian.

Cryptocrew • 10/9/2020

That is a perfectly okay label, if thats what you want to use. it is possible, just as there are nonbinary people who are feminine and call themselves lesbian. it doesnt sound strange. i know im rather late to this, but if that is the labels you are still using, you can continue to use them so long as you are comfortable

What's the difference between polygender and multigender? I'm looking at both and they seem to be describing roughly the same thing to me. Can someone please explain to this confused user?

What is the difference between polygender and omnigender besides the fact of the name

> Miiohau • 2/26/2018
> Do you mean pangender (omnigender is currently a redirect)? Polygender multiple genders but necessarily all. pangender is all. I personally find Polygender a more useful concept. It is an uncountable or great number of genders while admitting there may be exceptions. Pangender claims to be all with the possible exception of exclusive genders they don't qualify for. I wouldn't question somebody identifying as it but the Gender spectrum is so vast and varied how do you know you are experiencing the entirety of it.
